

The image shows the interior of the Ara Pacis Museum in Rome at night. A wide set of stone stairs leads up to a large, ornate stone archway. The archway is flanked by two large, rectangular stone panels featuring intricate carvings of figures and floral motifs. Above the archway, a series of small, square skylights are visible in the ceiling. The walls on either side of the archway are made of large glass panels, reflecting the interior lights and the night sky. The overall atmosphere is one of grandeur and historical significance.

ROMA, ARA PACIS